CHAPTER XXXIII—Continued.

Here he paused and took stock of his surroundings. The two or three buildings Mr. Hicks had erected stood miles way of the clearing and were very moderate incomments adapted to their owners somewhat dippant pursuit of agriculture. While Carrington was suit staring about him, the cabin door aware open and a woman stepped forth. It was the girl Bess. She went to a corner of the building and called fould." "I wan to, they's nothin' to hinder the called a woman stepped forth." It was the girl Bess. She went to a corner of the building and called fould." "I wan the called the cabin of the keel boat, and as instant later saw Slosgon clamber over its side. The averant keeper crossed to the cabin, where he was met by Bess, who placed his hands what seemed to be a wooden bowl. With this he slouched off to one of the outbuildings, which he entered. Ten or lifteen minutes slipped by: then he cases again met by Bess, who relieved him of the bowl. They exchanged a few word and Slosson walked away, and afterward disappeared over the side of the keel tout.

This much was clear to the Kentuckian: Food had been taken to some one in the shed.—Belty and the boy-more likely to George.

He waited now for the night to come, and the bowl. They exchanged a few word and Slosson walked away, and afterward loss presented time. The shed-to Belty and the boy-more likely to George.

He reached down and his hand reside on a man's booted foot. "George." Currington spoke softly head to the shed, and they embased in the head of the cap of the shed, and the shed, and him. "George?" he repeated, still bending above him. This time an inaricalize morrour answered him. At the same instant the woodly head of the negro came under his fingers and he discovered the reason of his silence. He was as securely gagged as he was bound. "Listen, George-ti's Cartington-1 am going to take off this gag, but don't speak above a whisper-they may hear speak above a whisper-they may hear lost." And he cut the cords that held the sag in place.

"How yo' get here. Mas'r Ca'ington," asked the perio guardedly, as the gag rell away. "Around the head of the bayou." "Lawd," exclaimed George, in a tone of wonder.

"Hush!" he grindy warded.

"What are you doin here" demanded the girl, as she endeavored to shake off his hand, but Carrington drew her into the shed, and closing the door, set his leave against it. There was a brief sheare against it. There was a brief sheare during which Bess regarded the Senturkian with a kind of stolid fearlessness. She was the first to speak. "I recken you sail have come after Miss Mairoy," she observed nuietly.

"Then you recken right," answered Carrington. The girl studied him from beneath her level brows.

"And you gill think you can take her away from here," she speculated. "I am't afraid of yo' knife—you-all might use it fast enough on a man, but not on me. I'll help you," she added.
